State award for Anexia:
Anexia awarded for exceptional achievements in the Austrian economy

The Carinthian IT company Anexia was awarded the Austrian state award. Alexander Windbichler, founder and CEO of Anexia, received the decree from Dr. Margarete Schramböck, Federal Minister for Digitisation and Business Location, in Vienna.

Vienna, 16.10.2018 - Since 21 September 2018, the cloud service provider Anexia from Carinthia has been the bearer of the Austrian coat of arms. The 31-year-old founder and CEO of the company Alexander Windbichler received this special award personally from the hands of Federal Minister Dr. Margarete Schramböck.

Investments and regionality
Only a few companies are awarded with the Austrian coat of arms each year for their extraordinary achievements in the Austrian economy. Criteria such as turnover and investment development play an important role here. But also factors such as sustainability or regional job security: "Carinthia is sold below value. Our head office in Klagenfurt is a good starting point. This is where our roots lie, even though we are becoming more active internationally," Windbichler notes.

Award is reward for development
Anexia has positioned and established itself as a medium-sized company that has been successfully active in the market for more than 10 years and is the only Austrian private player to offer cloud and other IT services on this scale. Windbichler: "It is a very special distinction and honor for the entire Anexia company that I was able to accept the decree on behalf of the entire Anexia team. We have developed impressively in many areas over the past 12 years, which is also a reward for the work of the whole team that made Anexia exactly what it is today".
